

Valnora Leister- Attorney specializing in international law and space technology transfer policies between developed and developing countries; D.C.L. (Doctor Civil Law) and L.L.M. (Master of Laws) from the Institute of Air and Space Law, McGill University, with a Bachelor's and Doctor's Degree in Juridical and Social Sciences from the Faculty of Law, University of São Paulo, Brazil. She was a Guggenheim Fellow at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, DC, and a Doctor Research Fellow at the The Hague Academy of International Law, in the Netherlands.

Dr. Leister is currently a senior fellow with Openworld, a non-profit research organization based in Virginia, which focuses on inclusive private sector oriented approaches to development. She is researching the convergence of international environmental and space law for a forthcoming book on Protecting the Rights of Future Generations in Outer Space.

She has served as a project attorney to the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) headquarters in Washington, DC from 1982 to 2007. As a project attorney she was responsible for legal advice to the operational units of the IDB, drafting and reviewing agreements for disbursing loans and grants to economic and community development projects in South American, Caribbean, and Central American countries, including a pioneering financing to develop an Argentine-Italian remote sensing satellite system.

She has also worked as a consultant (1980 to 1982) for the Science and Technology Division of the Embassy of Brazil to the United States, in Washington DC, where she advised on trends relating to science and technology, and liaised with science and technologies research centers and universities in the United States and Brazil.

Dr. Leister has contributed over the years papers and articles on space law and development to Law Reviews and other publications of the School of Law of the University of S.Paulo, as well as to the Proceedings of the Annual Colloquiums of the International Institute of Space Law (IISL). Recently she has given lectures at the International Law Association (ILA) Biannual Congress, the Brazilian Society of Aerospace Law meeting and the International Law Congress at the School of Law at the University of S.Paulo